Content footnotes

Content footnotes offer further information on a topic that is not directly related to the text. Please use them at the minimum level.
All footnotes should be numbered by arabic numerals, which have to be noted in the main text by superscript.
Please list the footnotes at the bottom of the relevant page.

References in the text of the paper

In the APA citation style a textual citation requires only the name of the author(s) and the year of publication given in parentheses. The parentheses may appear at the end of a sentence, before the full stop. The full reference must be listed at the end of the paper (reference list).

If the name of the author appears in the main text, in parentheses is given only the year of publication. If the name of the author name and year of publication appear in the main text, then the parentheses is omitted.

If you refer to the work of the same author by writing his name beyond the parentheses in one paragraph, you should write the year of publication in parentheses only after the first use of the author's name. If the name of the author is written in parentheses, write there also the year of publication.

If you mention the author for the first time, cite his first name and last name. Then write only the surname.

If a work has two authors, you should cite both names every time you refer to the work.

If the work has three, four, or five authors, you should cite all authors the first time your write the parenthetical reference, but only the first author followed et al. in subsequent references.

If the work has six or more authors, you should cite just the first author followed by et al. for all references, including the first.

If you refer to the works of various authors who have the same last names, you should cite the initials of their first names.

To differentiate works that have the same author and the same year of publication, mark the publication date of each work with a lowercase letter (a, b, c, etc.) in both the reference list and the parenthetical reference, in the order they appear in the reference list.

If you refer to two or more works by different authors within a single parenthetical reference, separate the authors and the years of publications by semicolons, and list the authors in alphabetical order.

If you refer to two or more works by the same author, cite the last names in alphabetical order followed by the dates of publication for each work.

Secondary sources

If you refer to a work you do not have direct access to and you know it only from the other text, in the main text you cite the name of original work and secondary source (the one that we used) using the form: "as cited in". In the reference list give only the name of the secondary source.

Direct quotations

If you directly cite from a work, you have to write the name of the author, year of publication, and the page number for the reference (preceded by "p.") in parentheses.

If the quotation is less than 40 words, write it in quotation marks. If the quotation are 40 words, or longer, write it in a free-standing block of typewritten lines, and omit quotation marks. Start the quotation on a new line in the same place you would begin a new paragraph.

In case you miss a part of the quoted text, use the ellipsis in square brackets.

Reference list

Reference list contains details only of those works cited in the text.
A reference list is arranged alphabetically by authors. If an item has no author, it is cited by title, and included in the alphabetical by the title.

The articles cannot contain plagiarism. Only original texts which have been never published as an article or a part of monograph, including electronic publications, can be submitted for consideration.

The editorial board reserves the right to reject or edit submitted papers.

The submitted papers are peer-reviewed anonymously by using "double-blind review" - the author does not know who is reviewing his work and reviewers do not know who is the author of the text.
